Research Interests

- Quantum algorithms: quantum state-instructed circuits, interesting algorithmic subroutines
- Catalysis in quantum information: catalysis in circuit compilation, state-oblivious catalysis
- Resource theories: resource broadcasting, composition of free state sets and free operations

Research Experiences

PhD Study

w/ Prof. Nelly H. Y. Ng

 Aug. 2021 –  SPMS, Nanyang Technological University

My PhD research focuses on the non-trivial use of auxiliary systems, such as catalysts or states instructing quantum circuits. In my catalyst-related work, I established the ultimate limit of catalysis within specific and generic resource theories. In my algorithm research, I developed a novel framework for quantum recursion with a circuit depth-width trade-off.

IBS Student Trainee, Research Assistant

w/ Profs. Juzar Thingna and Peter Talkner

 Jul. 2020 – May. 2021  PCS, Institute for Basic Science

My goal was to persuade the quantum thermodynamics community to explicitly consider measurement strategies in the operation of quantum thermal machines. I showcased that the appropriate measurement strategy enhances the performance of quantum Otto engines and battery charging processes.
