Research Interests

- Catalysis in quantum physics: catalysts dynamics in resource theoretic operations, catalytic advantages beyond resource theories
- Quantum thermodynamics: measurements effects on quantum thermal machines, thermodynamics-inspired quantum algorithms
- General resource theories: resource broadcasting and catalytic replication

Research Experiences

PhD Study

w/ Prof. Nelly H. Y. Ng

 Aug. 2021 –    SPMS, Nanyang Technological University

I aim to understand the origin of catalytic advantages in quantum resource theories and harness them in practical scenarios, potentially extending beyond resource theories. The first two projects I undertook revealed the pivotal role of the memory effect in catalysis. Currently, I am exploring quantum dynamics that could benefit from catalysis.

IBS Student Trainee, Research Assistant

w/ Profs. Juzar Thingna and Peter Talkner

 Jul. 2020 – May. 2021    PCS, Institute for Basic Science

My goal was to persuade the quantum thermodynamics community to explicitly consider measurement strategies in the operation of quantum thermal machines. In particular, I showcased that the appropriate measurement strategy enhances the performance of quantum Otto engines and battery charging processes. The results are published in PRA and PRX-Quantum.
